SCOTTISH SPORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) Edinburean, July 9.

THE AUSTRALIANS IN SCOTLAND. Cricket in Scotland received a much needed impetus from the result of the Scottish-Australian game, -our own little "test" match. To make a draw with the Colonials, a draw which made them put forth all their energies to escape defeat, is a feather in the cap of the North Country The regret is that it was a two days' match, and there could not be a fight to the finish. The Scottish side was fairly representative, even though the bowlers came from Yorkshire, --- we seemingly, cannot breed professional cricketers. "In the first innings, Scotland opened on a wet wicket with 93, and the Australians replied with 121,figures which justified the prediction that if the home team could only forget who, they were playing against they would make a fair show. The closeness of the game undoubtedly gave heart'to the Scots, and they went in again and put on 230. R. G. Tait of Forfarshire was the top scorer of the two days with 20 and 52. The Australians in their second attempt had to stretch themselves to save the game. They ran up 147 for seven" wickets, and therefore required 56 runs to win with three stumps to fall. This wasa moral victory for Scotland, ascreditable as it was unexpected. Over the two innings, each Scottish wicket was worth 16 runs, and each Australian just over 15: runs. The comparison does not take into account that Scotland batted one man short in the second innings, and that we were also handicapped by the loss of the best bowlers,—two men being hurt. On the first day, Ringrose and Broadbent dis-missed the Colonials without either assistance or rest, and that for 121 runs. The following was the Scottish team .-J. Anderson, Perthabire; R. G. Tait,
Forfarshire; M. R. Dickson, Arbroath
United; B. L. Peel, Grange; A. Lindsay,
Forfarshire; Broadbente Uddingston; G.
K. Chalmers, Forfarshire; Builey, Dunfermline; and Ringrose, Forfarshire.

Mr.E. Legge, a native of Aberdeen, and a graduate of the University, has won the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship. An anonymous donor gave £300 to North Berwick Town Council, to be divided into prizes at a professional golf tournament. George Duncan, the Aberdonian, now pro-fessional at Hanger Hill, came in an easy winner over two days' play; A. Herd, Huddersfield, second; and Harry Vardon, third. Duncan is looked upon as the player most capable of breaking down the barrier which has separated the "great quartett" of golf from their fellows. A still more remarkable though less remunerative feat was performed at this tournament by W. H. Horne, of Chertsey, who drove a ball well over a quarter of a mile,-to be exact, 469 yards. Glasgow Pressmen beat the Glasgow Police by five matches to two., Several of the constables, it is averred, had to warn their opponents engaged in bunkers that anything they said would be used against

The annual Championship Meeting of the Scottish Amsteur Athletic Association, held at Ibrox, Glasgow, "was one of the best in its history, so far as keenness and closeness was concerned, even though there was no record breaking. Of the twelve Championships five of the events. went into fresh keeping,—R. C. Duncan, West of Scotland Harriers, 100 yards; Ian Dickson, Edinburgh University, 220 and 400 gards; A. M'Phee, jun.; Clydesdale Harriers, four miles; and A. Halli-West of Scotland, hurdles. Nicolson. West of Scotland, regained the weight-putting championship, which he held from 1903 to 1905, and reguined the hammer-throwing, which has been his from 1902 onwards. The other titleholders taking a fresh lease of honours were R. Burton, Berwick and Teviotdale Harriers, half mile; H. T. Jamieson, Watson's College, the mile; G. H. Wilson, Glasgow University, high jamp; G. Stephen, St. Andrews University, long jump,—all these won in 1908 for the first time; and R. Quinn, Bellahouston Harriers, three mile walk.

At the Inter-University Congress Sports, attended by representatives from various Universities in Scotland, England, and Ireland, Ian Dickson won the 100 yards, the 220 yeards, and the quarter mile ; G. Stephen, St. Andrews, the long jump; E. F. W. Mackenzie, Edinburgh, the hurdles; and T. Welsh, Edinburgh, the half-mile. METSON IN THE STREET BULL SUBJECT OF THE PARTY.

Mr Goldwin Smith has never lacked a hearing whather he has written upon history or politics, and when, at the end of a long life, he gives us his reflections on religion and morals he may be sure of a very attentive audience. Hu has just published a little volume containing a pelection of letters addressed at various times to the Nice Tork Sun, which appears to have followed the example of the Daily Telegraph in starting a correspondence among its readers on the subject of religious belief, and to these is added an article on the religious situation in general, which appeared originally in the North American Review. Mr Goldwin Smith has, we see, been represented by some modern free-thinkers with having returned or relapsed into orthodoxy. But if orthodoxy means the definition of the Christian religion by the Trinitarian Churches, no orthodox teacher could, without peril, claim him for an ally. For he rejects, sans parase, and with less argument than would be proper in an extended treatise, most of the objective propositions and a great deal of the religious philosophy affirmed by the orthodox Churches. He does not believe, as they do, in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in miracles, in sacraments; in the bodily resurrection, or in any of the schemes of salvation which they propound. But he does apparently believe in the necessity of religion to mankind, and he does not bolieve in the 196] sufficiency of any materialistic or; scientific creed either to answer the riddle of the universe or to minister to the higher aspirations of mankind. This is the extent of his reaction from the negative thought o. a previous generation On the construct tive side he is content at the and with a question. May it not be, he sake, that what we call the spiritual side of a man's nature corresponds to some reality, and that man is, in this sense, his own witness, to the eternal and immortal? Let us put it. in his own words

Is there snything in man not physical, or apparently explained and limited by the transient conditions and necessities of his present state, anything which gives an fakling of immortality? Our atilitarian morality is the offspring and adjunct of our condition here. But is there not an aspiration to character which points to something more spiritual and higher than conformity to the utilitarian code. Heroism and self-sacrifice are not utilitarian.

We can furthly allow the investigation to be closed by the piere mention of the talismanic formulary Explication. There may be something still to be said on that subject. Evolution cannot have evolved itself, nor does it seem capable of infallible demonstration. It no doubt postulates vast spaces of time for its action. But within the space of time of which we in and conditions pertaining to selection and hardly in itself a proof of the generation of man from the ape. " //.

"On no subject, however, does one who is not a man of science or a philospher feel more intensely his deficiency, and his need of having his paths lighted by the perfectly free while reverent inquiry, to pray for which has been the object of these let-

To this we may add one more quotation - the passage with which he concludes the last essay in this volume: " Positivism tenders us endless existence as particles in a collective humanity, the colossal man. But would there be much satisfaction in existance when individuality and personal consciousness had been lost Would the prospect lead the ordinary man to work and suffer for generations to come, at all events, for any beyond the circle of the immediate objects of his love? What the end of the colossal man is to be seems undetermined. The Positivist Church has produced very good and heautiful lives, but its power as a religion to go slone would be more clearly seen were not Christisnity at its side. "Is there or is there not after all some thing in human nature apparently unsuscoptible of physical explanation and seeming to point to the possibility of a higher state of being f. Evolution may ultimately explain our general frame, emotional and intellectual, as well as physical . It may in time explain the marvels of imagination and memory. It may explain our mathetic NOTICE IS HERREY GIVEN that nature with our night and art. It may Petitions were on the 8th Jels, 1909, explain even our social and political frame

SCENE IN A BALL-ROOM

Gloncestershire ... 14 1

The wife of Lieutenant J. C. S. Hughes, of the Royal Navy, obtained a divorce from him on July 12th.

Once after a dance, she said, he had told her that a partner of his to whom she had was. He had then sent her spinning across the room. In 1906 he came to Hongkong and, returning in 1907, had brought another woman with him. He ab this time asked her: "Have you seen Mr Justice Jelf: You are going to take to-day's paper?" and pointed out that a him into coatedy in order that his body major had shot his mother-in-law.
